Coming of Age Roger Finch

This collection of short stories, Coming of Age, covers a period of the author's life from January of the year he turned twenty-one and emigrated from Pittsburgh – the city of his birth – to Washington, D.C. and worked for almost six years as a restorer of antiques at a shop on Wisconsin Avenue in Georgetown, owned by a Hungarian emigre. He then enrolled in the Columbian College of The George Washington University with a major in Music Theory and Composition and a minor in Studio Art (Drawing and Painting) while employed in the Registrar's Office of the College of General Studies, a division of the same university. During the decade that he resided in this city, he came in contact with a wide variety of people, some of whom helped shape his personality and exerted a strong influence on the further course of his life.
