Every year, multiple governments, watchdog bodies and academic institutions release statistics about how safe our hospitals are. In the USA for instance, the Journal of Patient Safety estimates that between 220 000 and 440 000 Americans die unnecessarily every year because of bad care given by doctors and nurses. In the UK, the NHS executive estimates about 1000 a month die for similar reasons, and in Australia, 18 000 lives annually are snuffed out because of 'mistakes' by healthcare professionals. However, that's just bad care: mistakes made under pressure or as a result of substandard care delivered by incompetent staff. What those statistics don't tell you is how many people die in hospital every year because they were deliberately killed by their doctor or nurse.

Don't think it's a rare phenomenon: the healthcare professions are a magnet for serial killers and psychopaths: there's no need to gain anyone's trust, means and opportunity are plentiful, and victims rarely fight back. The opportunity to kill with impunity, strike frequently, end lives effectively without being caught is irresistible to them. Death toll are high.

In terms of who's doing the killing, it seems that nurses lead the way and are thought to commit around 80% of all medical homicides. Not only that, the number of victims attributed to some cases often equals or even exceeds those of our most feared (non-medically trained) serial killers.

Nurses Who Kill catalogues 67 of the most evil nurses ever to have donned the uniform. From mild-mannered serial killers who discreetly ended the life of over 300 men, women and children in their care, to homicidal maniacs who liked to beat WWII vets to death with brass knuckles and duty-bound Nazi nurses who killed thousands with impunity, once you read it, you may never set foot in a hospital again.

Nurses Who Kill is Volume 1 of the 21st Century Encyclopedia of Murder. Volume II is Doctors Who Kill, Volume III is Soldiers Who Kill and after that, who knows... there's a lot of crazy people out there!
