THE LEDGE is a nerve-wracking incident about how we develop trust. In the end, we learn that we somehow use the word "trust" for both zero knowledge and for sufficient knowledge, which is a conflict each person must resolve. The story ends happily in an emergency rescue shelter, but begins with the falling-out of a young Seattle couple over the insistence of the guy that she simply "trust" him--the kind with zero knowledge. This version is a 40 minute film script. This story is based on Francis Schaeffer's (www.labri.org) "Faith vs 'Faith'" appendix in one of his major books.
